For many of us, being in college is our first time away from home. No matter where you call home, not being with your family and friends in your home community can be quite the adjustment. You may feel that transitioning to a completely new place can be challenging. But remember, it is normal to feel homesick and it is possible to conquer homesickness!

Adapting to new places and new faces can be overwhelming for anyone who is comfortable being in a familiar setting. Homesickness is common among many students regardless of where you call home. Homesickness is defined as "experiencing a longing for one's home during a period of absence from it" (oxforddictionaries.com). Students often struggle with balancing how to adjust from home to a new environment - however, there are many coping strategies that can help with the transition.
